Price US $29.95

Year : 1953

Starring : Raj Kapoor ,Nargis

Subject : Movie

Directed by : Raja Nawathe

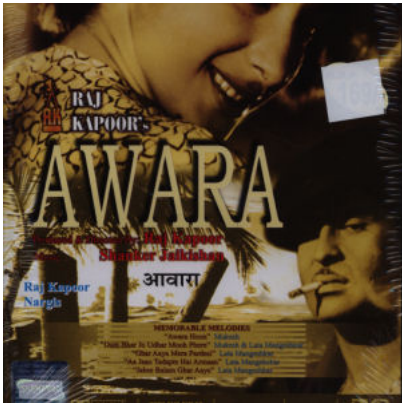

If circumstances had not made Raj into an engineer he would have become a poet. He was more interested in the perfection that nature promised than the human beings and their creations, which looked so incomplete to him. His father R.S. Gopaldas sent him to a far off place where Raj was appointed as an engineer. R.S. Gopaldas, one day decided to visit Raj and let him know about his dead mother's wish, that Raj should marry Chandra the sophisticated daughter of a rich family friend. Raj could not conceive the idea of getting married to a girl who was a complete stranger but eventually decided to listen to his father and give her a fair chance. Raj decided to write a letter to Chandra and the letter he wrote was nothing but sheer poetry and Chandra could not associate herself with the writer of the letter. But Neelu, the teenage sister of Chandra, was immensely moved by the reality and genuine human values that the letter conveyed. Chandra did not want to reply back to the letter, but Neelu asked her the permission whether she could reply to the letter on her behalf and after getting the permission replied back to Raj. This led to a chain of letters and Raj & Neelu got close to each other. Suddenly Raj was infected with a T.B disease and he couldn't live for a long time, so he decided to lie to Neelu because he didn't want her to know about the disease. And he told her that he was in love with her sister Chandra. He made a decision which was a premature death of his happiness. They say that the measure of love is not what you can take but what you can give up for it. Will Neelu give up Raj? And thus this strange love story heads towards climax, which is more tragic than any tragedy told so far.

Awara

Item/ISBN# HINDVD0409-007

Price US $29.95

Starring : Raj Kapoor, Nargis

Directed by : Raj Kapoor

Year : 1950

Subject : Movie

A homage to Chaplin, Raj Kapoor's portrayal of a hapless tramp in Awara is considered to be one of the finest performances. Judge Raghunath (Prithviraj Kapoor, R.K.'s real -life father) abandons his pregnant wife Leela, because he doubts the child parentage. Leela was kidnapped by a dreaded dacoit Jagga (K.N.Singh) who had let her go unmolested. Though Leela tries hard to make her son Raj , a lawyer like his father, Jaggu's influence tries to lure him into a life o crime. Now standing on trial for attempted murder, Raj comes face to face with his father who happens to be the judge on his case. Raj fall in love with Rita (Nargis), a lawyer who fights his case. Tragedy makes the father and son reconnect in a moving denoement. The movie is notable for its remarkable dream sequence and darkly surreal sets.

Raj Kumar Saxena (Raj Kapoor) comes to Bombay armed with honesty, Integrity and his degree along with a whole lot of dreams and aspirations of making it in this city of opportunities. Raj was to find out that his values and beliefs had no worth in a city like Bombay where the social system allowed the profiteers, black-marketers and other species of "420's" to make fortunes. In the course of drifting from one job to another Raj meets the beautiful Vidya (Nargis). Though very poor herself, this school teacher shared Raj's philosophy on life and they start to share the dreams. Raj soon learns that their dreams are impossible to achieve honestly--and so economic need and bitter experiences drive this simple and honest man to dishonesty and evil. Shree 420 tells the story of Raj's perilous journey into the high flying society where no price is too much to pay for success--a life of high stake gambling and drinking ---a life which drifts him further and further from his values, beliefs and Vidya.
