I know now that there is God...

He is not in the holy spirit we pray to... He isn't written about in religious texts...

He is someone who is a part of our lives... Whom we live for..

Because of whom we live...

Michele McNally is "special" in more ways than one. She cannot see... nor hear nor speak... She inhabits a world of infinite black... of a seamless, endless void where nothing reaches her and she reaches nothing. Her world is frightening in its complete remoteness. On the sheer will of her ferocious rage against destiny, Michelle struggles to stay afloat in the impenetrable whirlpool her life has become.

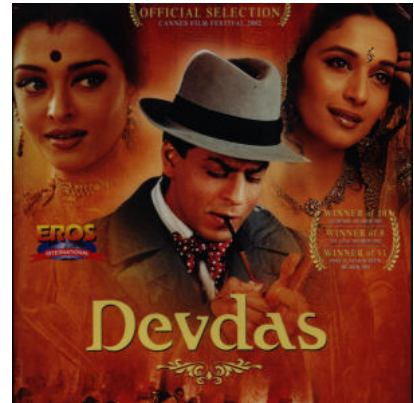

Into this devastating isolation enters a battle weary teacher, Debraj Sahai, life's wounded but arrogantly insolent warrior. With a single minded obsession, Debraj takes up a challenge that is next to impossible - to lead this wild, uncontrollable child into the light of knowledge.

Devdas shared a magnetic childhood with his lovely playmate Paro where supreme love was felt before it was understood ... But, alas, a fateful moment of weakness on the part of Devdas created a permanent wall of separation between him and his beloved Paro ... Unable to bear the agony of a life without Paro, Devdas made alcohol his constant companion ... Even the unflinching devotion of a beautiful courtesan Chandramukhi, did not ease the heartache of losing Paro. It was only when his eyes closed to a permanent sleep, did the pain begin to fade. But even before losing the light of life, all Devdas urged was to see his Paro just once, thus giving his love the greatest dignity.
