By : Anonuevo, Victoria

Subject : Children Book

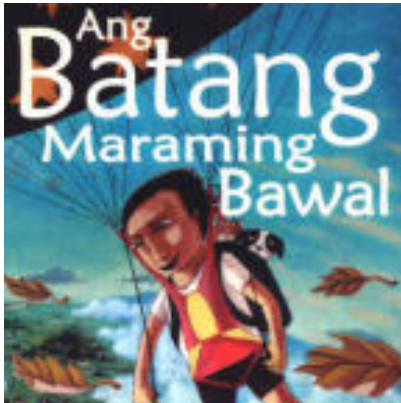

In the olden days, the people did not have permanent homes. They stayed in places where there was food to eat. The other natives lived near rivers and lakes. Fishing was their means of livelihood. Among the group of natives were the couple Bana and Abu. Bana wished so much that they could stay in one place. Bana wanted to have a child in it will be difficult if they keep on moving from place to place. Abu built a hut. The place was perfect. There were lots of fruits and animals for them to hunt. nearby was a river where they can fish. There was drought. Abu and Bana could not find any food. Abu decided to look for food in other places. He had traveled far but there was still no food in sight. Abu was so tired and fell asleep. The song of the grasses woke him up. They told him he could eat there grains. The grasses with golden grains told Abu how to eat them. Afterwards, Abu filled his basket with the grains. The grains told Abu to plant in a soil , tenderized by rainwater. Abu and Bana were happy they had food now. Abu took grain's order by heart. He had to plant the grains. he had to call the grains Palay. Abu taught the natives how to plant palay. They became farmers since then. They did not move places anymore.
